11/8/18

Ethan,

Got your letter dated 11/2/18. There are two people in the army, Infatry or Support. I was in Sapport + never saw any action. The job you will have will be sapport and chances are you will never see any action. Your job will be a support job + like I was, never even carried a Rifle. If I went someware where their might be any danger, I had infatry Riding with me or surrounding my location. So don't worry the army isn't stupid they will protect any support group person supporting them.

So you liked the gas chamber, it was defiatly something everyone should go thru at some time, in their life.

So your still worried about your PT Scores. Theirare commericals on TV about the army needing more soldiers all the time, so I don't think they will fail you if you aren't perfect in PT as long as your trying.

They just tell you that you could fail but they need support people really bad & with your high test scores they would be stupid to fail you. They told us the same story when I was in & believe me they never failed anybody. We had men who couldn't do 5 push ups, or even run ¼ mile.

Just Remember I love you & have faith in God, he knows what your life is going to be.
